

A significant proportion of South Florida's Hispanic immigrants hold University degrees, well over the national average

U.S. Hispanics Education level 25 years and over (2002)

Based on: U.S. Census Bureau March 2002

South Florida's Hispanics Education level

Based on: Latin Review 2006 - StatmarkGroup

Findings from our publication Latin Review 2006 among first generation Hispanic immigrants to South Florida, revealed a higher educated profile, when compared to the average nationwide US Hispanic education levels.

College educated Hispanics in South Florida are four times higher than the national Hispanic average. Three out of four South Florida Hispanics have at least 2 years of college. The Venezuelan community stands out as the most educated one.

